

Successful Workshops Organised by RDI Hong Kong

Studying UK University programmes with RDI means benefitting from-added value elements such as Skills –Related Workshops. Students have confirmed that their approaches to assignments and examinations have changed after attending such workshops. As a result their works have improved. For those who have not yet participated, we encourage that you do so in the near future.

In the last week of February 2011 alone, RDI in Hong Kong organized 3 Skills-Related Workshops – all of which were very well-attended and very well-received.

The first workshop focused Assignment Writing. The second workshop focused on the final Project for Bachelor degree students and the third workshop focused on Dissertation.

A BSc Level 3 student said: “I found the workshop useful on those aspects such as how to understand the question word, what is required and expected by tutors which is really helpful.”

A Bachelor Level 1 student said: “It was a well organised and well-structured workshop and most importantly, Mr, Simon Delay delivered a very clear lecture which really helps us doing the assignment.”

An MBA student said: “Thanks for organizing the workshop, I found it very useful especially I have two 3500words assignment due on March 14 and April 4. I will be interested in research skill at the moment which I needed the most. In the future it would be nice to have workshops related to courses or soft skills would help a lot.

The feedback we received has been amazing. Many of you also suggested a few other good ideas for future topics.

So RDI students, watch out for the next workshop. We always inform you beforehand. Email us if you wish to attend the next workshop and inform us what other workshops you wish to attend by emailing info@rdihongkong.com.
